Purpose: The rapid growth of PET technology in the Asia-Pacific region has seen the installation of many PET scanners in the region. However, with this growth, arises the need for adequate training of nuclear medicine specialists reporting this new technology. Australia is a leader in this area with extensive expertise in all areas of PET, and well placed to lead the education and training of nuclear medicine specialists in this arena. The objective of the RTC is to train specialists in nuclear medicine from RCA Member States in reporting advanced clinical applications of PET for clinical management of patients.

Expected Output:	Nuclear medicine specialists trained in the essentials of PET reporting, with the focus on oncology and neurology PET scans. At the end of the training course, trainees will have a thorough understanding of most advanced clinical applications of PET in cancer management. They will also be able to organize national training courses on the the same topic at country level. . A basic introduction into cross-sectional anatomy will also be provided.
Scope and Nature:	The RTC will be run with frontal lectures on topics most relevant to the purposes of the course; role of PET in specific disease states; clinical cases discussions; PET reporting sessions and read-with-the-expert sessions.
Background Information:	The RCA project RAS6049 is in succession to the RAS6042 titled with “Tumor imaging using isotopes”. The RCA project RAS/6/042 was focused on the improvement of clinical management of cancer patients through clinical PET. Clinical PET activity beyond oncology is going to be covered by this new project. Medical imaging by means of PET makes currently the most important roles for the clinical management of patients: 1) Evaluating viability of primary lesion, 2) Staging, 3) Selection of appropriate therapy, 4) Monitoring therapeutic efficacy, and 5) Discriminating recurrence of lesions from anatomical changes through therapies. The current project assists the RCA MSs to improve their quality management of clinical PET performance for patients imaging.
Participation:	The training course is open to 12 participants from RCA Member States participating in the project RAS/6/049 that have already established clinical PET facilities or have realistic national and/or institutional plans on the introduction of clinical PET.
Participants’ Qualifications:	The nominees should be medical doctors, qualified in nuclear medicine with an already solid experience in practicing PET. Participation of clinical oncologists willing to understand the role of PET in cancer management is also acceptable. The selected participants should contribute to the implementation of the project in their countries by disseminating the knowledge gained in clinical reporting on PET scanning.
Nomination Procedure:	Nominations (including those of local participants) should be submitted on the standard IAEA Application Form for Training Courses (available on the IAEA web-site: http://www.iaea.org/) Completed forms should be endorsed by relevant national authorities and returned to the Agency

The aim of these courses is to educate participants on how best to avoid or minimize potential dangers and threats, and to show what individuals can do if they find themselves in insecure situations.

The courses are available on the following UN websites that can be accessed using Microsoft Internet Explorer:
